Kenesis Corporate and Information Consulting selects Omega Legal

Washington, D.C.—March 6th, 2008—After an extensive search and evaluation process, Kenesis Corporate and Information Consulting (“KCIC”), a management consulting firm, has selected Omega Legal as the firm’s new Financial and Practice Management system. Omega Legal will be used to run the firm’s front and back office operations, including time entry, billing, accounting, collections, conflict search and reporting.

“We needed a sophisticated, but easy-to-use, system that could handle complicated financial transactions including automated expense allocations, inter-company transfers, etc.,” explained Jeri Rhodes, Principal of KRL Consulting, who advised KCIC on the selection. “We also knew we wanted a system that could be easily customized to our specific operational needs while requiring the smallest number of tech support staff to run efficiently. Omega provided all of that.”

KCIC (www.KCICLLC.com) is a nationally recognized consulting firm that specializes in litigation support, settlement negotiations and insurance-related asset and liability management.

Omega Legal Systems, Inc. (www.OmegaLegal.com) in Phoenix, Arizona has been providing legal and professional services firms nationwide with fully integrated Financial and Practice Management Systems for more than 30 years.
