Omega Legal Proves Best Choice in Financial Management For Colorado Firm

Advanced Reporting, Database, Reputation Key Criteria for Mid-Size Firm

PHOENIX—May 16, 2006—Omega today announced that Denver-based Isaacson Rosenbaum this summer will convert to Omega Legal, an integrated financial and practice management software system for mid- to large-size firms. According to Gary Harrop, the firm's chief operation officer, the 42-attorney firm chose Omega Legal to replace its outdated system because it was the most integrated, versatile and user friendly option available, with a highly robust database that would scale to handle the firm's expected growth with very little maintenance.

"In our in-depth evaluation of several financial management systems, we put high priority on finding one that would include time & billing, accounting, collection, conflicts and marketing in a cost-effective and easy-to-use system we wouldn't have to replace in a few years," Harrop said. "We're confident that Omega Legal will give us all of these features, with advanced reporting capabilities that will greatly improve our ability to track the productivity of our attorneys and the profitability of our firm. We were also impressed with Omega's ability to customize the system to meet our unique needs, including adding an automated new business intake process and synonym search capability to the conflicts module."

As a key component of its advanced reporting capabilities, Omega Legal enables instant access to a firm's most up-to-the-minute financial, statistical and historical information from a single server. Based on the powerful and scalable InterSystems Caché™ post relational database, there are no performance issues, even when generating month-end bills or detailed financial reports. As a result, unlike competing systems, no full-time database administrator is needed, greatly decreasing the costs often associated with maintaining a financial management system.

"Omega Legal's excellent reputation in the marketplace, reinforced by its very happy installed customer base in the Denver area, validated our decision," Harrop added.
